Father's Day

Father's Day

Kura: First off, Happy Father's Day! If you read Mother's Day. Then you're in for a treat.

*Sakura: This is the sequel to Mother's Day. Enjoy Father's Day, and we start off with our favorite viking, Hiccup and his father, Stoick. ****

Ten year old Hiccup H. Haddock III looked at the gift he got his father. He knocked on the door to his room, his father working hard.

"What is it Hiccup?" Stoick asked, not looking up from his map. He was marking down any place they could hide traps for dragons. Hiccup placed the folded up piece of paper on his desk.

"Happy Father's Day..." he said and hugged his father.

Stoick opened the paper. A roughly drawn picture of him poised throwing a boulder appeared. Beside him was a fallen dragon. And he was aiming the boulder at the dragon in the sky. Smiling, he looked at the small note with it.

. _I hope that one day, I'll be just like my dad. Strong. Bold. And brave._

5 Years later...

Stoick sighed as Gobber took Hiccup away. He pulled out a sheet of paper. He unfolded it. 5 years. It's been five years since he was given the picture by Hiccup five years ago. He sighed and smiled. He may have not admitted it, and he may not admit it ever, but that day five years ago, was the best Father's Day of his life. And he was sure, that one days, when Hiccup was a father, he'd return the gift his son gave him. He'd return the same kind words that he had written.

Kura: Next up . Merida and Fergus. Review!
